

Scuncyco Gaming

The organization will be playing titles like LoL, CS:GO, Fortnite, and PUBG. We also keep our eyes open for other games that are growing. If a game has viral potential, is competitive, and is fun to play you can be sure that the Scuncyco team will be competing there.

Unlike normal sports, in esport the type of game in which the team competes is very important: Soccer will not disappear 200 years from now but StarCraft2 (SC2) probably will. You have to keep up with the times, and understand what gamers play, stream and watch. The best strategy is to diversify your portfolio of games, in this way the risk of making wrong investments is reduced. A bad investment decision would be creating a SC2 team in 2022.

In any case, not caring about the economic parts, I would have a team on Tetris and Team Fortress 2 (TF2) just because I damn love those games. what? my team my rules :)

We are a digital-first brand, we want to specialize only in competitive videogames because here is where the best communities are born. Not only do we want to win but we want to share our entire journey with the fans. We want to make the esports infrastructure available to any gamer: that's why we stream and share on social media all our training sessions, coaching sessions, and life at our gaming house.

We want to become the reference point for all the underdogs of this world who want to rebuild their careers in esports by helping them step up their game.

Our color palette includes a gradient from cyan to fuchsia. This represents the ups & downs of every learning journey, every victory, and every defeat. A single defeat does not make us lose the war.
