

Please share your experiences with Esports media. Which kind do you like best? Do you search out different types of media for different kinds of information? What do you project about the future of Esports media? Also, share some examples of your favorite social media tactics, streamer accounts, and Esports content.

Honestly I don't use social media (Twitter, Instagram, Facebook) but I often watch videos and live streams on Twitch and YouTube.

I believe that consuming this kind of content is very important if you are serious about improving!

You can learn many things from the best players. It is especially important to watch them to better understand how to compose a good team, how to collaborate, how to manage the enemy and how to intercept certain situations before they happen.

As mentioned in the course, one of the main differences we have between sports and esports is the fact that the vast majority of viewers are also gamers, so mainly the content I value most is breakdowns of the best plays, frag montages, and advice from the pros.
