

Team Liquid is one of the most respected and successful organizations in esports history.

Throughout time, Team Liquid has won countless tournaments in numerous disciplines. The most important of them are The International 2017 in Dota 2, Intel Grand Slam Season 2 in CS:GO and four LCS Splits in League of Legends. Since August 2017, Team Liquid has been ranked first in the list of organizations with the highest overall prize money earnings.

They won over $38,680,681.53 in prizes from 2170 Tournaments.

The company leadership includes Co-Executive Chairmen Peter Guber, Ted Leonsis, Jeff Vinik, and Bruce Karsh who together represent an unparalleled team of sports, technology, entertainment & investment industry titans.

They are also the most-watched esports organization in 2021 is Team Liquid. Compared to 2020, the club has increased its Hours Watched by 43% (up to 117.15M)

Team Liquid is a world-renowned professional gaming organization established in 2000. Since their grassroots beginnings as a Battle.net clan and StarCraft community site, they have grown into a multifaceted global company with unprecedented reach in the industry.

They have a division in pretty much all the most important esports: Apex Legends Artifact Clash Royale Fortnite Counter-Strike: Global Offensive Dota 2 Free Fire Hearthstone Heroes of the Storm League of Legends Rocket League PUBG StarCraft II Street Fighter Super Smash Bros. Tekken 7 Tom Clancy's Rainbow Six Siege Valorant World of Warcraft.

This organization highly focuses on showing fans how serious they are about their ambitions of being the top team in the league. They do so by professionalizing their working environment through e.g. building a new head office, increasing their staff team, and upgrading their roster with known world-class players. Fans can see the progress of the team in weekly high-quality videos on YouTube. Team Liquid also emphasizes its seriousness by collaborating with established brands like Honda or Marvel.

Be bigger than winning: How team liquids created his brand image:

"I found this pic with the horses running through the snow and thought it was pretty cool," Smorrie said. "Having the horses together as a 'team' and the snow as, uh, 'liquid.' The horses in the 'After The Storm'-artwork reminded me of the Nazgul (the Nine Riders in Tolkien's 'Lord of the Rings'). With Nazgul being the founder of Team Liquid it seemed [like] a perfect match, with the exception of the fact that the horses in the image were made out of snow rather than water."

Sources:

- 1) <https://www.esportsearnings.com/teams>
- 2) <https://escharts.com/blog/top-esports-organizations-2021>
- 3) <https://www.teamliquid.com/about>
- 4) https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Team_Liquid
- 5) <https://modernbuyerbehaviour.wordpress.com/2019/09/29/be-bigger-than-winning-how-esports-teams-create-their-brand-image/>